History

PCVC Andhra began in 2007 with the objective of scaling up and replicating the PCVC models for intervention with children out of school and working in coastal rural areas. Bapatla (Guntur District) was chosen as the pilot area for the first phase of intervention. A first baseline survey was conducted in Bapatla to gather information on out-of-school and working children in the area. The data was presented to the Education Department, as a result of which our first shelter was opened in the State.

In 2008, PCVC was asked to participate in a rescue operation with the Labour Department in Hyderabad – a rural coastal area where children are engaged in key occupations like fishing, agriculture and working in factories.

A second phase of intervention for working children was launched in Karimnagar District in partnership with our team last year, and this partnership has continued to thrive.

PCVC AP is one of the fastest growing programs of PCVC, having successfully expanding interventions internally to urban areas.
